

Financial Wellness:

My financial wellness plan involves continuing to build my long-term wealth through investing in growth stocks and allocating around 10%-20% of my income per paycheck to my Roth IRA and Brokerage Account. At the same time, I plan to increase my income by taking on part-time jobs during my college years to ensure I have enough money to have some fun while also investing. By maintaining a budget and living within my means, I can make smarter financial decisions. I plan to track my spending, and I hope to build an emergency fund soon in case I do end up needing it. Ultimately, improving my financial wellness means being purposeful with every dollar I spend and earn so that I can achieve financial independence one day in my later life.

Physical Wellness:

My physical wellness plan includes both my diet and exercise routine. I currently go to the gym a couple of times a week, but I want to develop the daily habit of going. Exercising more will boost both my physical health and mental health. In addition to this, I would like to continue my good eating habits during the day and cut back on my late-night snacking. This means that I would look to eat more during breakfast and lunch, and less during dinnertime and after. I can also look into increasing my intake of fruits, vegetables, and protein in order to reduce sugar and carbohydrate cravings. My goal is to create a lifestyle that promotes my long-term health and well-being throughout my entire life.

Mental Wellness (Stress Management):

When it comes to mental wellness, I see that stress is a natural part of life that none of us can get away from, but effectively managing it is essential to a better lifestyle. One way I manage my stress at the moment is through listening to music and exercising, which helps clear my mind and boost my energy. This month, I am starting Accutane (Isotretinoin), which may alter my mood slightly. I intend to keep my communication with my support circle open and communicate with my loved ones if anything does come up. I will also try to engage in more outdoor activities with friends to fill the day with excitement overall. By identifying and addressing my stressors, I can improve my mental health throughout my college life.

Spiritual Wellness:

Spiritual wellness is something that I have only begun recently, last year. I attend church almost every Sunday, and it gives me the chance to engage with my community. In the future, I look to make my attendance 100% and deepen my faith by making time for personal prayers and reflection. This mindfulness helps me stay more connected to something that is ultimately greater than any one of us, and it reminds me that there is always someone watching out for me. Developing this consistent habit of personal prayer, meditation, and reflection will help me stay calm and hopeful for the good days to come. My goal is to live with faith that my spirituality will guide me through the day and point me in the right direction.

Reflection of the Class:

What I enjoyed most about this class was your slower lecturing style and the way you connected the topics to the students themselves. My favorite unit, personally, was the most recent unit about investing. I already know a decent amount about stocks/bonds/real estate/etc, but learning more in-depth about each one and learning about more ways to invest that I didn't know existed really caught my attention. I appreciate how you are always happy to be there and teach us, and how it seems like you understand what you are teaching, rather than simply reading off the slides. Overall, this class has been a great introduction to my college experience, and I would recommend it to anyone else who wants to start college as a business student at SJSU.

Thank you for everything you've done as our professor.
