

1. Good introduction, homelessness academic, raise money, clear 3 topics, note card usage is a little more than needed
 2. Good speech flow and 2 citations, lack of body movement, good information
 3. (I think their partner was gone, this was their part) Reading note cards, jumbled speech, nervous / The conclusion was good, a good summary, looking at the professor rather than the audience.
 4. Good visualization of issue, too steady of tone, call to action was split into 2 parts.

1. Good poll to start, introduction to animal cruelty, reading note card, clear transition
 2. Good body movement and reasoning in speech, good citations, jumbled phrasing but I understood his point
 3. Clear solution to issue, purchasing from "cruelty" (advocacy) brands, and contacting police, and good tone and voice
 4. Visualization turned into call to action rather than visualization, short visualization,
 5. Presenting 2 QR codes, police and donation places, also watch and report these issues, short and to the point

1. Starting with a poll about food drives, good citation, got to the point of food insecurity after some time. 3 main points
2. Starts with a true fact, and a hypothetical, citation criticizing the government
3. Solution→ second harvest (food bank/volunteering), many people use the support of food banks, also donations,
4. Explaining how volunteering works, reading note card
5. Recap of speech, citation, list of a few food banks and how they donate to their cause, reading card, address of second harvest and their phone number
