

Artifact #1: Dean's Leadership Circle Display - Boccardo Business Education Center

- a. The audience is primarily the SJSU students, faculty, and others who visit the campus and the business center. This is clear to the audience because the monument is located at the entrance of the Boccardo Business Education Center.
- b. The purpose is to recognize and honor the people who donated and contributed to the College of Business. It also highlights the organizations and campaign teams that helped develop the building. The purpose of putting it inside the building is to draw the attention of the business students specifically as the memorial is for their building specifically.
- c. The artifact implies that the leadership and community support are what helped create that building into what it is today. It argues that the people who helped contribute back into the school are leaders who deserve the recognition for their help.
- d. You would need to understand that the building was built in the year 2000 and that all of the names on the artifact are people who helped develop the business center. Whether it was through their fundraising or campaigning, these people are the ones who enhanced the business department within the San Jose State University.
- e. I believe the artifact appeals to ethos because it builds credibility. It does this by highlighting the donors and leaders who were a part of the development of the business center.
- f. The artifact is effective in conveying its intended message as it clearly shows the donors and what each of them contributed to the Boccardo Business Center. The display may also inspire others in showing them that anything can be done with enough community support and effort.

Picture is Below

DEAN'S LEADERSHIP CIRCLE

James F. Boccardo, J.D., Ph.D.
Lecturer in Law, San Francisco State University
The David and Lucile Packard Foundation

BLUE CIRCLE

David Koppa
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates

FACULTY AND ALUMNI DONORS

John Koppa, Ph.D.
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates
J. J. Koppa & Associates

CAPITAL CAMPAIGN LEADERSHIP TEAM

Rich Proctor, Chair
Ken O'Connell, Vice Chair
Ben Williams, Vice Chair
Michael J. Bialik
James J. C. Smith
Robert J. Case
Curtis Cooklin
Scott Donahue
Bryan Erickson
David F. Hill
Celia Griffin
Garry Kervick, Lead
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick
Garry Kervick

GOLD CIRCLE

James F. Boccardo, J.D., Ph.D.
Lecturer in Law, San Francisco State University
The David and Lucile Packard Foundation

VENTURE PARTNERS

James F. Boccardo, J.D., Ph.D.
Lecturer in Law, San Francisco State University
The David and Lucile Packard Foundation

Artifact #2 César E. Chávez Monument

- a. The audience of this monument includes the SJSU students, staff, and visitors. Although the main target audience is the students themselves. We can assume this because the monument is placed in the middle of the campus near the Union Square and food court.
- b. The purpose was to honor César E. Chávez and his legacy in the civil rights movement. In this, they also want to inspire the students to follow in his footsteps in advocating for social justice. The design makes it clear that it commemorates his fight for farmworker's rights as well.
- c. Yes, the monument argues for the importance of social equality and labor rights. It suggests that collective action and leadership can make all the difference in helping this movement. The artifact uses César E. Chávez's life as a model for others to follow.
- d. An understanding of the history of the U.S. and the social, racial, and gender inequality is needed to understand the significance of the artifact. Someone may also need to know what true impact he had during his time and how he co-founded the United Farm Workers (UFW). Without this context, someone may not understand what this person did to be so important in history today.
- e. The monument appeals to pathos as it honors César E. Chávez as a symbol of justice. We use his model to bring pride and a need for action into the students who see the artifact every day. It may also appeal to ethos since his credibility proves him as an activist. This therefore reinforces the significance of the monument and its overall message.
- f. It is highly effective in conveying its intended message as it uses a mixture of linguistic and visual methods in order to display the historical significance of César E. Chávez. This monument is placed in the center of the school so that students walk by it daily and are inspired to follow his values through possible community service or leadership roles on campus.

Pictures Are Below

